

Sam had grown tired of doing the exact same thing every single day. She wanted to see more than just the corn on her farm.

Sam eventually came across the mobile app Hitch-a-Ride, which would allow her to connect with other travelers and save on travel costs.

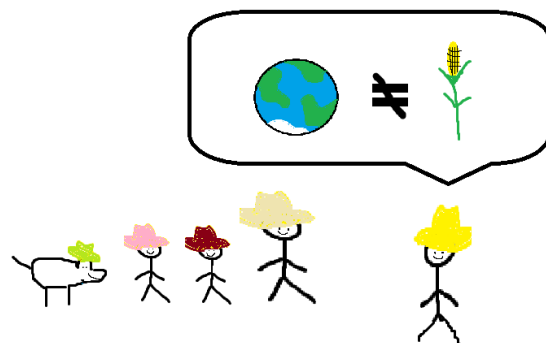

It did go well, of course, and Sam was relieved to have been able to see life beyond the farm. She wished she had found out about Hitch-a-Ride earlier.

As a matter of fact, Sam's entire family felt this way. She was worried that being unable to afford long-distance travel would get in the way of her goal.

And just like that, Sam was off. She decided to try the service out on her own first, and then report back to her family if all went well.

Sam then told her entire family about Hitch-a-Ride, and how it allowed her to see that there was more to life and to the world than just corn.